

AGREEMENT FOR LEGAL SERVICES

Attorney review required. This is a starting form, not legal advice. Fee, trust-account, contingency, and client-communication requirements differ by jurisdiction: an attorney must review and adapt this document, and confirm it against the applicable rules of professional conduct, before it is used with a client.

This Agreement for Legal Services (the “Agreement”) is made between the law firm identified below (the “Firm”) and the client identified below (the “Client”). It states the work the Firm will do, what that work will cost, and what each party is responsible for. The Client should read it in full and ask about anything that is not clear before signing.

Appeals, enforcement or collection of a judgment or order, and any new or related matter are not covered unless this Agreement expressly says so. Work outside the scope stated above requires a separate written agreement or an amendment to this one signed by both parties. Other lawyers and staff of the Firm may work on the matter under the responsible attorney's supervision.

2. Fees

The Client agrees to pay for the Firm's services on the basis checked below. Only a checked arrangement applies to this matter; the subsections that are not checked are of no effect.

The Client will deposit the advance with the Firm before work begins. The Firm holds it in its client trust account and applies it to fees and costs as they are billed and earned. Any unearned balance is refunded to the Client when the representation ends.

4. Costs and expenses

Costs and expenses are separate from fees and are the Client's responsibility. They include filing and court fees, service of process, court reporters and transcripts, records, expert and investigator fees, mediation and arbitration fees, electronic discovery, travel, and delivery charges.

Costs are:

☐ Paid by the Client as they are incurred

5. Statements and payment

fifteen (15) days

Each statement shows the work performed, the fees and costs charged, and any trust balance. The Client should review each statement promptly and tell the Firm of any question or disagreement within the time stated on it. The Firm may stop work, and may seek to withdraw, if a statement is not paid when due.

6. The Client's responsibilities

The Client agrees to be truthful and complete with the Firm; to provide requested documents and information promptly; to preserve documents, messages, recordings, and other records relating to the matter; to keep appointments and court dates; to report any change of address, telephone number, email address, or employment; and to make the decisions the law reserves to the Client, including whether to settle.

7. Communication and confidentiality

The Firm will keep the Client reasonably informed and will respond to inquiries within a reasonable time. Communications between the Client and the Firm about this matter are confidential and protected by the attorney-client privilege. Sharing them with anyone outside the representation can waive that protection.

The Client consents to receiving communications about this matter by:

8. Payment by someone other than the Client

Third party paying fees, if any

Relationship to the Client

A third party who pays the Client's fees is not the Firm's client, has no right to direct the representation, and is not entitled to confidential information without the Client's written consent. The Client may withdraw that consent at any time. Time the Firm spends dealing with a third-party payor is billed to the Client.

9. Ending the representation

The Client may end this representation at any time by written notice. The Firm may withdraw to the extent the rules of professional conduct allow, including for non-payment or for a material misrepresentation by the Client, after reasonable notice and steps to protect the Client's interests. Withdrawal in a pending case requires court approval. If the representation ends, the Client remains responsible for fees earned and costs incurred through that date, and the Firm may apply trust funds to the outstanding balance.

10. The Firm's right to fees

To the extent the law allows, the Client grants the Firm a lien against funds held for the Client in the Firm's trust account and against any recovery in this matter, for fees earned and costs advanced. The lien is released when the balance is paid in full. Any award of attorney fees against another party does not make that party responsible to the Firm, and the Client remains responsible for the balance owed.

11. No guarantee of outcome

Nothing in this Agreement is a guarantee or prediction of any result. Legal matters are decided by courts, agencies, and opposing parties, whose decisions the Firm does not control. Any opinion the Firm gives about the matter is offered to help the Client evaluate it.

12. The file and its retention

The Firm retains the closed file for

15. Entire agreement

This document is the entire agreement between the Client and the Firm about this matter. It replaces any earlier discussion or understanding and may be changed only by a writing signed by both. If any provision is held unenforceable, the rest remains in effect.

By signing, the Client confirms having read this Agreement, having had the opportunity to ask questions about it and to consult another attorney about it, and agreeing to its terms. The Client is entitled to a signed copy.
